

Lockheed Martin Aeronautics And Systems Integration Executives Available To Media During Australian Air Show At Avalon Airport

PRNewswire

Lockheed Martin program managers and business development executives representing a broad range of aeronautics and systems integration programs will be available to the news media during the 5th International Air Show and Aerospace Exposition Feb. 13-18 at the Avalon Airport in Victoria, Australia.

Among the programs company officials will be prepared to discuss are the F-22, Joint Strike Fighter, C-130J, F-16, JASSM (Joint Air-to-Surface Strike Missile), Arrowhead, LANTIRN (Low Altitude Navigation and Targeting InfraRed for Night) and Longbow.

Lockheed Martin's business chalet at the air show will recognize the 80th anniversary of the Royal Australian Air Force and the company's enduring support of the RAAF dating from 1940 and continuing into the future on the strength of new products for the RAAF such as C-130J and JASSM.
