Lockheed Martin Celebrates 75 Years In Baltimore

What: Lockheed Martin will celebrate its 75th anniversary in Baltimore Oct. 7. Community and government leaders, company retirees and current employees will participate in the celebration and luncheon.

When: Thursday, Oct. 7, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Where: Lockheed Martin, 2323 Eastern Blvd., Baltimore, MD 21220

Details: Highlights of the event include: a mini-museum reflecting 75 years of history, a 1929-style big band and speakers from the company and community. In addition, the authors of the two winning entries from the Lockheed Martin historical essay contest, for which the company received more than 100 entries from the public, will read their essays.

Historical photographs and video footage are also available for media use.

Background: Seventy-five years ago, Glenn L. Martin moved his rapidly growing aircraft manufacturing facility to Baltimore and purchased 1,260 acres of land in Middle River. Everything the company needed was here, including water, rail and highways. On Oct. 7, 1929 the facility was officially opened and, at one point, more than 53,000 people worked at the facility. On Oct. 7, 2004, Lockheed Martin will celebrate its long history and bright future as a business member of the Baltimore community.

To Cover: Contact Danielle Feinblum at 410-682-0102 or danielle.feinblum@lmco.com by 1 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 6. Photo identification is required for entry.

For additional information on Lockheed Martin Corporation, visit: http://www.lockheedmartin.com/.

PRNewswire -- Oct. 4

SOURCE: Lockheed Martin

Web site: http://www.lockheedmartin.com/

Company News On-Call:
http://www.prnewswire.com/gh/cnoc/comp/534163.html
