

Lockheed Martin Names Michael Feeley Vice President And General Manager Of San Diego Site

SAN DIEGO, April 21, 2011 /PRNewswire/ -- Michael Feeley has been named vice president and general manager of Lockheed Martin's (NYSE: LMT) San Diego site for its Mission Systems and Sensors (MS2) business.

Feeley also will serve as vice president of Command, Control, Communications, Computers and Intelligence within MS2's Undersea Systems business area.

"Mike has been instrumental in furthering our company's leading position in the open architecture computing domain and in extending this innovative business model across multiple platforms in the U.S. and allied navies," said Denise Saiki, vice president of Lockheed Martin's Undersea Systems. "A former Navy officer, he brings extensive customer knowledge and expertise to this important position."

Feeley joined Lockheed Martin in 1998, serving in a number of leadership positions within program management and business development. In his most recent assignment, he led the business development team for the Undersea Systems business. His Navy career spanned 27 years and included assignments as Commanding Officer, USS Phoenix (SSN 702) and Commodore, Submarine Squadron 3. Feeley served multiple tours in headquarters staffs including those of the Chief of Naval Operations, Chief of Naval Personnel and Chairman of the Joints Chiefs of Staff. Feeley is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy.

Headquartered in Bethesda, Md., Lockheed Martin is a global security company that employs about 126,000 people worldwide and is principally engaged in the research, design, development, manufacture, integration and sustainment of advanced technology systems, products and services. The Corporation's 2010 sales from continuing operations were $45.8 billion.
