

Derco Aerospace Renews Exclusive Distribution Agreement With Goodrich Engine Control And Electrical Power Systems

MILWAUKEE, Wisconsin - Derco Aerospace, Inc. announced today it has renewed its exclusive distribution and license agreement with Goodrich Engine Control and Electrical Power Systems to equip C-130 and P-3 aircraft platforms with hydraulic pumps. Through this agreement, Derco Aerospace continues as Goodrich's exclusive worldwide distributor, and Derco Repair Services, Inc. remains the only authorized licensed overhaul and repair facility. Derco Aerospace and Derco Repair Services are part of Sikorsky Aerospace Services (SAS), the aftermarket division of Sikorsky Aircraft Corp., a subsidiary of United Technologies Corp. (NYSE:UTX).

Derco has earned the trust of service centers worldwide through quick turnaround times for complete Goodrich pumps. These components play an integral part in increasing the life cycle of the 54H60 propeller system – sustaining legacy aircraft and supporting the U.S. Navy NP2000 propeller modernization program. "We are honored to continue servicing Goodrich's high quality products through our world-class facility, while offering exceptional delivery to our customers," said Jason Wiedoff, Director of Derco Repair Services.
