Lockheed Martin Receives 2013 Climate Leadership Award From The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

BETHESDA, Md., Feb. 28, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has awarded Lockheed Martin (NYSE: LMT) the Climate Leadership Award for its exemplary commitment and dedication to responding to climate change. Lockheed Martin received the award in the Goal Setting Certificate category for publicly reporting and setting aggressive greenhouse gas emissions reduction goals.

The Climate Leadership Awards program recognizes and encourages corporate, organizational and individual leadership in reducing carbon pollution. The EPA partnered with The Climate Registry, the Center for Climate and Energy Solutions, and the Association of Climate Change Officers on a national awards program designed to incentive, recognize and highlight actions that go beyond business as usual in the management and reduction of greenhouse gas emissions.

"We are honored to be recognized with the prestigious Climate Leadership Award, but we know our environmental sustainability work doesn't stop here," said Carol Cala, Lockheed Martin's vice president of Energy, Environment, Safety and Health. "We are dedicated to achieving our Go Green 2020 goals through our commitment to environmental leadership and sustainable operations, as well as our alignment with our key customers' goals."

The award will be presented tonight at the Climate Leadership Conference inWashington, D.C. This event brings together leaders from business, government, academia, and nonprofits to exchange best practices on how to address climate change and run more competitive and sustainable operations.

Headquartered in Bethesda, Md., Lockheed Martin is a global security and aerospace company that employs about 120,000 people worldwide and is principally engaged in the research, design, development, manufacture, integration, and sustainment of advanced technology systems, products, and services. The Corporation's net sales for 2012 were $47.2 billion.
